A Guide to Commercially Issued Sound Recordings of Performances by Aboriginal Peoples and Torres Strait Islanders: 1899-1998 is a true product of team work. It is based on the Discography of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Performers (Dunbar-Hall, 1995) - an earlier collaboration between ScreenSound Australia (Simon Drake, coordinator) and Dr Peter Dunbar-Hall. Staff from ScreenSound Australia (formerly the National Film and Sound Archive) and the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies have conducted subsequent research to bring the work to its present form.

This Guide has been produced by ScreenSound Australia in co-operation with the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies as part of ScreenSound Australia’s Collection Guide Series. As the Series aims to promote and increase access to the collections and resources, the holdings of both organisations are included against relevant entries. Thus the Guide not only tells us what recordings of performances by Indigenous peoples have been commercially issued, but importantly, where they are located.

A collaborative work of this nature undoubtedly involves many people and I would particularly like to thank the following individuals for their contribution: Dr Peter Dunbar-Hall, Simon Drake, Mary Miliano, Trenna Langdon, Michael Herrick, Bob Morrison, Mark Juddery, Victoria Ramshaw, Mick Newnham, Amanda Reynolds and Grace Koch. Many others provided invaluable information and feedback at various stages and I gratefully acknowledge the contribution of: Lola Forester, Rod Hurley, Angela Martin, Ed Matzenik, Doug Petherick, Graeme Rayner, Eric Scott, Rob Scott, Chester Shultz, Alan Ward, David Jagger, Mark Bin Baker, Richard Micallef, Warren Fahey, Jimmy Little and Clinton Walker.

Most significantly, this Guide is a celebration of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander musicians, whose music has enriched the lives of people from all over the world.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

Restricted Material
Culturally restricted material has been included on some commercial releases. Recordings which contain a significant portion of restricted material have not been included in this Guide. However, several recordings which have only one restricted track on an otherwise open recording, have been included with the restrictions clearly marked. Readers should also note that in many Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures, restrictions apply to the names of recently deceased people, and to the sound of the voice of a deceased person.

Structure of the Guide
The Guide is divided into two sections based on broad categories of musical style - Section 1 includes traditional music and Section 2 includes non-traditional music. Section 2 is also divided into two parts - performers and groups are listed in Part 1 and compilation albums are listed in Part 2. If a performer or group features on a compilation album, only a reference is given in Part 1 - readers can find the full details of the album in Part 2. Recordings which contain both traditional and non-traditional music are listed in both sections and marked with an asterisk (*).

Section A
The entries in Section A are organised alphabetically by title, and include the following information when available: title; date recorded; release date; collector/editor/producer; musical group/performer; series; format (cassette, CD, LP); company label; catalogue number; ScreenSound and AIATSIS holdings; and, general notes. For example:

ABORIGINAL MUSIC FROM AUSTRALIA

Series: Unesco Collection: Musical Sources
LP/cass. - Philips (for Unesco): 6586-034
ScreenSound Australia cover 243001 - (LP) PLM002553
Held at AIATSIS

Section B, Part 1
The entries in Section B, Part 1 are organised alphabetically by performer or group, and then alphabetically by title of the work. The following information is included when available: performer/group; title; release date; series; type (album or single); format (cassette, CD, LP) company label; catalogue number; ScreenSound Australia and AIATSIS holdings; general notes; and, references to involvement in compilation albums or other performer’s/group’s albums. For example:

 General note: Tiddas feature on this album.

Ruby Hunter also features on the compilations Yella Mundi, Celebration: The Spirit Of Port Fairy, Songlines: Acoustic Sounds From Black Australia; and the Archie Roach album Jamu Dreaming.

In Part 1, the contents are only added to distinguish works which have the same title.

Section B, Part 2
The entries in Section B, Part 2 are organised alphabetically by title, and include the following information when available: title; release date; series; format (cassette, CD, LP); company label; catalogue number; ScreenSound and AIATSIS holdings; contents; and, general notes. There are two main types of compilation albums listed: albums which contain mostly or totally Indigenous performances (for example, Beat The Grog); and albums which contain only one or two tracks by Indigenous performers (for example, Australian Memories). Only partial contents are listed for the latter type.

BEAT THE GROG

How to access collection material

Material from the NFSA Collection can be made available for viewing or listening at any of our collection access centres. Items can be loaned or copied for off-site access with permission of third party copyright owners or agreement of the NFSA.

The NFSA does not usually hold the copyright for the works in its collection, so clearing the right to use material and seeking permission from the copyright holder will be the responsibility of whoever wishes to use the material. Indigenous material is made available in accordance with NFSA’s Indigenous protocols.

Copying and loan services are prioritised for the media production sectors and for scholarly and educational interests. We are unable to provide copies or loans of collection items for personal use unless a direct personal connection such as an appearance or performance by a family member can be established.
INTRODUCTION

by

Peter Dunbar-Hall

The history of the recording of music performed by Indigenous Australians dates, as far as can be traced, from 1898 when ninety seven wax cylinder recordings were made during an expedition led by Alfred Haddon, from Cambridge University, to the islands of the Torres Strait, and Borneo and New Guinea (see Gillis, 1984). Of these cylinders, only eighty three were still in existence when Moyle wrote her listing of contents in the mid 1980s (Moyle, 1985). The original cylinders are held by The British Library National Sound Archive (London), and although their contents have not been commercially released, a complete taped set is held at the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies (AIATSIS) in Canberra. Publicly released recordings in cassette form of wax cylinders recorded at the same time in Tasmania, however, were made available by the Royal Society of Tasmania in 1960. These recordings are of Fanny Cochrane Smith (?1834 - 1905), who claimed to be the last surviving Tasmanian Aborigine. Smith's recordings, made in 1899 and 1903, are thought to be the only recordings made of Tasmanian Aboriginal songs and language (see 'Voice from the Past', Saturday Evening Mercury, 13 June, 1959; Longman, 1960; Moyle, 1960; Koch & Burgis, 1984). A third significant collection of early recordings of Aboriginal performances is that of approximately one hundred cylinders made by Sir Baldwin Spencer in South Australia and the Northern Territory in 1901 and in 1912. Some of these cylinder recordings were transferred to LP disc, issued as Recordings of Australian Aboriginal Singing (W & G Records, 61207, undated) (see Moyle, 1959; Gillis, 1984; Koch & Burgis, 1984).

Examination of the collectors in Section A attests to the work of A. P. Elkin and A. Moyle, whose field recordings made between 1959 and 1966 provided the material for the significant compilations Aboriginal Sound Instruments, Songs from the Kimberleys, Songs from North Queensland, Songs from Yarrabah, and Songs of the Northern Territory, issued by the then Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies (later AIATSIS).

A significant trend among some Australian Aboriginal rock groups is demonstrated by the contents of Section A, the practice of including traditional material alongside contemporary popular songs on what are ostensibly rock albums. This is found on recordings by at least four bands: Blekbala Mujik (Midnait Mujik, 1990; Nitmiluk, 1990), Sunrize Band (Lungguruma, 1993; Sunrize Band, 1993), Tjapukai Dance Theatre (Proud to be Aborigine, 1989), and Yothu Yindi (Homeland Movement, 1989; Tribal Voice, 1991; Freedom, 1993).

Comparison of the contents of Section A with the discography of Stubington (1979) shows relatively sparse subsequent activity in the area of commercial release of recordings of Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander traditional music. This becomes more evident when comparison is made between the contents of Section A and the number of recordings of non-traditional music in Section B. Although commercial recordings of popular music by Indigenous Australians began during the 1950s with Harold Blair, Olive and Eva and Jimmy Little, analysis of the release dates of material in Section B demonstrates a substantial increase in releases of popular music from the mid-1980s. This may be due to a number of factors, among them the contribution of recording companies. A number of recordings are released by the Central Australian Aboriginal Media Association (CAAMA), which began releasing recordings in 1984. Also significant is the work of Enrec Studios (producer of the cassette series Koori Classic) and Larrikin Records, one of the few recording companies to maintain a separate Indigenous catalogue as part of their commercial output. On another level, the wish to explain Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures to non-Indigenous Australians, and the need to express Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander opinions on matters of political concern, cannot be discounted as the impetus for recording activity.

General note: “Discretion should be exercised in playing these recorded songs in the presence of Aboriginal people. One of the singers recorded here has since died and the sound of his voice may cause distress to listening relatives and countrymen from the Maningrida area. As a general rule, in any one Aboriginal community, recorded songs should be played first to a group of older Aboriginal people. Permission might then be sought from these people before further playback to others.” -- cassette insert.
